C. S. PINGLE SHOWS WHERE MONEY GOES FOR EDUCATIONAL DEBT

All Money Spent for Development of Province and People in all Walks of Life Benefit by it -- Will Use his Influence to Stop Piping Gas from Redcliff Field.

At the political meeting last Monday evening, Hon. C. S. Pingle made it plain to the people of Redcliff that he is opposed to having gas piped from the Redcliff field, and that he will use his influence to prevent this being done. He told the audience he had the assurance of the Minister of Public Works that no agreement would be entered into by the government with any company for this purpose without first consulting the people of Redcliff. With this assurance Mr. Pingle closed his remarks at one of the best attended political meetings ever held in Redcliff, which was held in the Amuse-U theatre in his interests last Monday evening.

The hall was well filled for this government and the general good of the province as a whole. Mr. Pingle and W. A. Buchanan, M.P. for Lethbridge was also present and addressed the meeting. In a very able manner he reviewed the record of the Stewart government, and pointed out that throughout the whole campaign he had not hesitated to speak out against the government's policy of railway or corruption against Mr. Stewart or his associates. On the contrary Mr. Stewart enjoyed the reputation of being a man whose integrity and honesty of purpose could not be questioned. He is a democrat in the true sense of the word and a man of the people, citing a farmer himself and because of his experience and legislative ability, there is no man in the province in a better position to advise the government on the interests of agriculture and all along all other lines. Mr. Buchanan contrasted the record and ability of the Stewart administration with what would confront the province should that administration be defeated at the polls next Monday, or returned without a good sure working majority. If defeated, a party without a leader, without a policy, and without any legislative experience might be called upon to form a government. The situation at the present time is far too serious, and the province which now depend themselves for too important to make any experiments in the government of the province. If the result of the poll should leave Mr. Stewart without a good working majority, the situation would be much the same as that which Manitoba now finds itself, and the result could not help but be detrimental to the progress and development of the province. The ability of Redcliff's member had been recognized by his associates in the house, and he felt sure that further promotion was in store for Mr. Pingle in the next legislature. For this reason the electors of Redcliff constituency should show their appreciation of Mr. Pingle's ability and achievements by returning him with a handsome majority next Monday.

Seven miles of this debt was spent for building roads and bridges throughout the province, five million for public buildings, and two and a half millions for education. He did not say any fair-minded person could find fault with any of these expenditures in a new province like Alberta, which is in much need of all these developments, especially in view of the fact that demands were continually coming in from every corner of the province for additional expenditures in all these lines. Mr. Pingle also referred to other matters which contributed to the present debt of the province, and that these were the loans made to advanced school pupils who were desirous of receiving education but had not the money to take the required training. The assistance given to school districts for the purpose of building teachers' residences. Additional grants to consolidated schools and two-roomed schools. The advanced legislation along public health lines. The building of mental hospitals, the supplying of trained nurses for rural districts. Expense in connection with the administration of the labor legislation, the unemployment workmen's compensation act, government employment agency. Government assistance in helping to develop the coal mining industry and other enterprises. In dealing with these items Mr. Pingle pointed out that all these monies were expended for the general development of the young province and for the benefit and advancement of all classes within the province. When these expenditures were made he did not think any fair-minded person could find fault with them. On the contrary the only criticism offered was that some of the expenditures were not larger. The item singled out for this criticism depending largely on the individual or organization making it.

In closing Mr. Pingle appealed to the electors for their support on the record of the Stewart government, and on his record as their representative as a supporter of that government. He would make no statement beyond assuring the people that he would always work in the interests of the Redcliff constituency so far as it was consistent with the policy of the

A change has been made in this town and now the polls will be held in the school instead of in Crowe's hall as previously advertised. The polling booth will be open from 9 a.m. till 3 p.m.

W. C. SMITH'S CHOICE J. F. A. CONVENTION

Large Number of Delegates Present Opposed to Placing Candidate in the Field—Had Little Fault to Find With Stewart Government—Redcliff Member

At the U.F.A. convention held last Thursday, W. C. Smith, of aVie, was selected as the candidate to run in the U.F.A. interests in this constituency against Hon. C. S. Pingle. Before nominations were received there was considerable discussion as to the advisability of placing a candidate in the field. This discussion followed the introduction of a motion brought in by the Shawville branch, which was as follows: "Resolved, that we, the members of the Shawville Local of the U.F.A., do not favor nominating a candidate at this convention, believing that such a course would mould public opinion against us in the next Federal election."

To support this resolution Mr. McCallie stated that their Federal needs were greater than the provincial needs, and while not entirely satisfied with the Provincial Government, there wasn't much they could find against it. It was a time when we should forget our likes and dislikes and vote for the best interests of all. He believed they would be serving their best interest by not contesting the seat. The resolution was seconded by Mr. Musa, who stated that he had not heard one reason why the farmers should enter the field. He believed that entering the political field at the present time would raise public opinion against them. He had always been opposed to Mr. Pingle and while he was not satisfied with the present government in every detail, he was satisfied that it would be in the best interests of all to not contest his seat at this particular time.

W. C. Smith, J. Clarkson and others spoke against the motion and overwhelming a large percentage of the delegates were against political action in this regard as was announced to the river in the Vale district. So far as we know he has been actively interested in politics in the past, and it is a question he has not yet decided.

When nominations were called for the following names were placed before the convention. W. C. Smith, James McCracken, John R. Jones, P. H. Wedderburn and John Fowley. Mr. Jones and Mr. Fowley withdrew and Mr. Smith was elected on the first ballot and was made the unanimous choice of the convention.

Each candidate spoke in behalf of the Farmers' platform which had been drafted by the central committee at Calgary and endorsed by the convention.

De Valera and his colleagues are now in London for the purpose of discussing with the British government the Irish situation.

Next Monday Will Be Election Day In Alberta

Next Monday will be election day, when the electors of this province will be called upon to exercise their franchise and say by their votes whether they want the Stewart government continued to power or whether they want the affairs of this province handed over to an untried party, without a leader and without a provincial platform.

In this constituency there are two candidates in the field. Hon. C. S. Pingle, who has represented this constituency in the legislature for the past eight years, is the candidate against the Stewart government. He is appealing to the electors on the record of the Stewart administration, and on his own record as a representative for Redcliff riding. Mr. Pingle is well known to the electors in every corner of the riding. During his term of office he has been constant in his efforts to do everything possible in the interests of his constituents, and all admit that he has been successful in this regard as was announced to the river in the Vale district. So far as we know he has been actively interested in politics in the past, and it is a question he has not yet decided.

When nominations were called for the following names were placed before the convention. W. C. Smith, James McCracken, John R. Jones, P. H. Wedderburn and John Fowley. ENTERTAIN BOY SCOUTS TO OUTING

Will Spend Day at Some Appropriate Place in District—Boys Asked to Watch for Fuller Announcement—He Prepared

Arrangements are now being made by the Boy Scout executive to entertain the boys to a day's outing in the near future. The date now the place has as yet been definitely decided upon, but it will probably be some day next week, and the indications are that the day will be spent at Lakeview Lake.

Since we are not able to give definite information in this issue, the boys are asked to keep in close touch with their patrol leader so as to be able to get the desired information as soon as possible. The boys are asked to co-operate with the boys so that their outing may be made as enjoyable as possible. Each boy will be expected to provide his own lunch, which should be enough for two meals. It should be kept in mind, however, that no unnecessary hunting should be taken on and that parcels be made up as neatly and as compact as possible, so as not to overtax the capacity of the car. Baking and fishing tackle should not be overlooked.

It may be possible that fuller particulars will be available at the next meeting tonight. All who should attend this meeting. When the date is announced the boys should be at the meeting place promptly on time so as not to interfere with the plans.

Still Has Faith in League of Nations

Former Premier Asquith, speaking at a luncheon in honor of the premiers of the overseas dominions, said that the imperial conference would always be associated in history with what he himself regarded as an event of major importance for the future of the world—that nothing that had happened during the last few years—the conferences proposed by President Wilson, the conference of the Pacific and the limitation of armaments.

"I have not myself lost faith in the League of Nations," said Mr. Asquith, "but who can doubt that it has been and is a serious drawback to its practical efficacy that our brethren in the United States have not seen their way clear to associate themselves with it. We ought, I think, to welcome with the utmost pleasure the initiative which the president has now taken. So long as the United States finds her way to the international councils, it matters little by what device she enters."

The premiers of Canada, Hon. Arthur Meighen, and the premiers of the British Empire, including the President Harding's invitation.

What Coal Strike Did For Britain

Consequences of the coal strike are shown in the further decrease in British trade for June.

Imports are down 82 million pounds compared with June, 1920. Exports have increased 75,000,000 pounds. Cotton imports are less by 11,000,000 pounds; wool by 7,000,000 pounds; flour and grain by 4,000,000 pounds; and other food stuffs and drink are down 9,000,000 pounds. Total exports decreased by 5,000,000 pounds and total imports by 87,500,000 pounds and cotton manufactures by 28,000,000 pounds.

The question of whether the Pacific conference is to be held in London or Washington is understood to depend upon the attitude of President Harding. It is said in London.

Big Possibilities for Development in Canada

The enormous possibilities of Canada's industrial and commercial development, given adequate financial backing, were brought out in an interesting address by the Hon. J. H. Macdonald, which was read at the Royal Canadian Institute by James H. Macdonald, Esq. of London.

After reviewing Canada's agricultural and industrial resources, Mr. Macdonald, who is largely interested in coal in Alberta and land in Saskatchewan, was pointed out the striking difference between the present position of Canada and the United States. Although the United States is not superior in size or natural resources, within the hundred and seventy years that Canada's products have been available to the British Empire, America had developed into a nation of 110 millions of people, while Canada produced only 10 million. America had grown so wealthy that this country was actually indebted to her over the war to the extent of a thousand millions.

What, asked Mr. Bryce, was the cause of this amazing disparity? The chief reason, he pointed out, was the "cheapness" of Great Britain, and secondly our Free Trade legislation of 1846. America and Germany had imposed a protective tariff on the importation of Canada's goods. The Dominion was actually indebted to her over the war to the extent of a thousand millions.

A dispatch to the Burlington Times from Warsaw, says it has been learned that the British government is anxious to purchase Polish oil, and that he also has run down a plot to overthrow the present Polish government. The number of arms have been made.

British Admiralty Pursues A Courageous Policy Of Most Rigid Economy

Great Britain is building four new battleships and ordering 12 more which are already being placed. It will be recalled that these new ships were included in the naval estimates, announced some little time ago, and are to replace those of an obsolescent type. Three years will be necessary to make the ships ready for sea and the approximate cost of each ship will run to $90,000,000. In this announcement there is nothing to cause undue excitement, it being merely the sequence of a well-considered Admiralty scheme, which does not in any way involve a rate in armaments.

A diagrammatic statement is available of the number of battleships under jurisdiction of the three leading naval powers, representing their position in the present year and what it will be in the year 1924, assuming that the four new British battleships are completed by that time. "It reads:

1921	1924
United States	17
Great Britain	17
Japan	11

It should not be forgotten that men at power consider as much in men as in ships, and in this connection it may be recalled that when Mr. Walter Long was First Sea Lord last year, he stated that the British fleet of the British fleet would be 127,500, including officers and men. So far as ships are concerned, the British Admiralty has pursued a courageous policy of rigid economy since the close of the late war. Of the vessels which were ordered in 1918, only the time of the armistice many of them were scrapped, and following that action, the Admiralty sent to the ship-breakers' yards almost a couple of hundred completed vessels, embracing many classes of battleships, all considered more or less obsolescent.

In the past Great Britain maintained a two-power standard and afterwards built to maintain a 60 per cent. superiority over Germany, whereas now a one-power fleet is all that is aimed at. The British Admiralty, by its action, has set an example consistent with the new idea embodied in the League of Nations.

The Change in Manners

Boston Professor Deplores the Modern Trend in Slip Show Manners.

Boston's most distinguished orator, President Emerson, in his address to the Harvard Club, W. Eliot, of Harvard, is discussing the manners of men and women. He says that he has watched young men and "ladies" for many generations, and their fashions have changed tremendously since he was a young man. He says that the young women do things now that would have been "simply out of the question" when he was young man. He says the girls expect to be rude. He says that young men and women are coarse even in their greetings and farewells nowadays. He admits that "an old-fashioned person like me" may misjudge youngsters of today, and he wishes that the change of manners is for the better.

Dr. Eliot's remarks were made in an address to the Society of Harvard "Dames in Cambridge, the other day, and were printed in the Harvard Alumni Bulletin.

Beaver Farm in Alberta

One of the Largest Beaver Farms in the West on Ribstone Creek, Near Edmonton.

F. F. Parkinson, who has a farm two miles east of Edmonton on the Ribstone Creek, has probably one of the largest beaver farms in Western Canada, says John H. Parkinson. Although beavers have become almost extinct in most parts of the country, under government protection during the last five or six years they have multiplied in the Ribstone Creek very rapidly and at the present time in parts of the stream where conditions are suitable they thrive in huge numbers. The Ribstone Creek runs through a part of Mr. Parkinson's farm for a distance of nearly a mile. The creek, which is only from twenty to thirty feet wide, is bordered for the most part with poplar and willow which furnish a supply of food, and wood for building their dams, as well as a protection. In this section of the stream it is estimated that there are several dozen beavers. Occasionally a beaver is seen at work, but it is impossible to determine the number, except by the evidence of trees being cut down and used for food and the dams built.

The beavers are kept from moving up or down stream by a fence made of wire, barbed wire and the section of the stream which they inhabit. Mr. Parkinson intends to build a fence along both sides of the stream as well.

Beavers have been under government protection for a number of years, but special arrangements have been made in the case of beaver farms where the furs are sold through the province. The furs are sold through the province at a price of $200 per hundred pounds of the sale price being retained by the government. The standard of profit for the farmer is $200 per hundred pounds of the sale price being retained by the government. The standard of profit for the farmer is $200 per hundred pounds of the sale price being retained by the government.

The British Columbia Forests

Total Value of Forest Products for 1920 Was $92,628,807.

Forest and Commercial Government reports show that British Columbia contains approximately half of the saw-logs of Canada. The total value of the forest products of the province for the year 1920 was $92,628,807, as against $70,285,004 for the previous year. The value of the lumber cut advanced by nearly 25 per cent, while the increase in the value of pulp and paper amounted to over a nine million.

Community Health

Subject Should Interest All, Says Calgary Doctor.

"Every citizen owes to his best interest should take a keen interest in the health and status of the community," said Dr. J. H. Macdonald, Calgary doctor, during an address on community sanitation at Calgary. "The health of the community is the common health of those living in it," he declared, and urged everyone to exercise the best judgment during the summer months when the health of the community is liable to become prevalent.

Trees To New Zealand

British Columbia Trees Sent to Antipodes for Reafforestation Purposes.

Vast tracts of waste lands throughout New Zealand are undergoing the process of reafforestation with British Columbia trees, declared Mr. F. J. Nathan, managing director of the manufacturing firm of Joseph Nathan & Co., Limited, Palmerston North, New Zealand, who arrived in Vancouver recently. Canadian experts had been brought over by the government, he said, and a systematic scheme for developing big forest reserves was being carried out.

Frail Growth at Grand Forks.

The frail growth of the trees of the Grand Forks, B.C., district, is causing the benefits of a considerable immigration this summer. During the past week, two carloads of settlers have arrived from the United States, and substantial loads of fruit land were purchased by two Frenchmen, and in a critical form of the situation.

Good Farm Management

Good Farmer is Out to Make the Most Possible From This Year of Farm Operation.

Good management is the first essential to success in farming just as it is in any other business. The good manager is always on the alert for ways to improve his farm.

He is always planning for and securing things that will save him time and money. He is always looking for ways to make more money out of his farming business.

This year is a special test for farm management. Some farmers, because of disappointment in regard to last year's crops are inclined to be less active than usual. They are impatient and perplexed. Their plans for the year are indefinite. They are not really going to "do it all," missing out on many of the opportunities to advance themselves along the road of accomplishment.

The good manager, on the other hand, is out to make the most possible from this year of farm operation. Though the prospect for profits may not be so promising as it was in the spring of recent years, he sees opportunities as good as, or better than, he was in the years before the war. And he is striving to get the most out of the year by taking full advantage of these opportunities.

Widely in the province in 1920, numbered 10,365, a net decrease of 2,435 over those of 1919. The record for any one year had previously been held by 1918, but this last report goes beyond that record by 1,673. The birdseed per thousand of population was 272.

Education and Calgary rank almost neck and neck in the birth rate with 2,339 and 2,307, respectively. Children born in British Columbia are distributed in both cities, and particularly in Calgary, where the figures were 1,099 and 1,098, respectively.

Edmonton the births were 907 of British stock and 816 Canadian.

Coal Licenses in B. C.

During 1920 Twelve Coal Leases, Covering 7680 Acres, Were Granted.

During the fiscal year 1920, 27 coal prospecting licenses were granted in British Columbia, covering an area of 126,000 acres, as compared with 712 licenses in the previous year and 712 in 1918, according to Hon. T. D. Pattullo, Minister of Lands. The fees paid on account of these licenses totaled $13,840. Twelve coal leases, covering 7680 acres, were issued during the year, as compared with three in 1918. Revenue on account of coal lease results received during the year was $53,247, and the total received under the Coal and Petroleum Act $38,441.

My First Dog Driving

By O-G-E-MAS-ES (Little Circus).

(Copyrighted)

I received orders in January of the year 1874 to start west with the Western Packet of the Hudson's Bay Company and had purchased a nice team of young dogs and light carriages, and a clerk who came in from Swan River. The packet man was a famous driver, he did not mind driving and went to his long home a year or so ago.

I had been in the Fort Garry school and had the confinement and had made application on several occasions to be sent inland (all the area outside the Red River settlement was called in those days) but the matter dragged, and at last, on the 15th of January, I had my way. So the long look for land had been at last, and I was really off for the unknown interior west day. I slept mostly little that night, having waking dreams of great prairie stretches covered with buffalo, high mountains and forests, with the big sea island and all the good things of really wild Indians.

I turned two goods to be true. The first was a good one at last and what a delay in the office, closing an important despatch, it was after an early lunch before we left. I paid thirty dollars for the horses and received a hearty hand clasp from Chief Factor John H. McTavish. He was of the opinion that the unknown interior was a good one, and I was really off for the unknown interior west day.

My First Dog Driving

By O-G-E-MAS-ES (Little Circus).

(Copyrighted)

I received orders in January of the year 1874 to start west with the Western Packet of the Hudson's Bay Company and had purchased a nice team of young dogs and light carriages, and a clerk who came in from Swan River. The packet man was a famous driver, he did not mind driving and went to his long home a year or so ago.

I had been in the Fort Garry school and had the confinement and had made application on several occasions to be sent inland (all the area outside the Red River settlement was called in those days) but the matter dragged, and at last, on the 15th of January, I had my way. So the long look for land had been at last, and I was really off for the unknown interior west day. I slept mostly little that night, having waking dreams of great prairie stretches covered with buffalo, high mountains and forests, with the big sea island and all the good things of really wild Indians.

I turned two goods to be true. The first was a good one at last and what a delay in the office, closing an important despatch, it was after an early lunch before we left. I paid thirty dollars for the horses and received a hearty hand clasp from Chief Factor John H. McTavish. He was of the opinion that the unknown interior was a good one, and I was really off for the unknown interior west day.

"In the Middle of the Stream."

There is an old saying to the effect that "it is unwise to swap horses in the middle of a stream." This saying can very properly be applied to conditions in Alberta at the present time, when a general election is on and the people will be called upon next Monday to say whether they wish to continue the Stewart government in power, or replace it with some other untried and leaderless party.

When one reviews the record of the Stewart administration and considers especially the large amount of new and advanced legislation which has been enacted during the past few years—much of which can still be considered as in the experimental stage—he will be convinced that we are, so to speak, in the middle of the stream, and that much of the success of the application of this advanced legislation will depend on the return to power of the party and leaders who initiated it.

In much of this advanced legislation introduced by the Stewart government, Redcliff and district is vitally interested: One outstanding item is that of irrigation. In this respect the Stewart government is on record as "pledged" to support any irrigation scheme in any district where a system of irrigation is feasible. Already some districts have taken advantage of this offer, and although the preliminary work is progressing favorably to all concerned, yet it must be admitted that the movement is still in the experimental stage. Or in the words of the heading of this article we are "in the middle of the stream." Would it be wise, then, to entrust the carrying out of this scheme to new, inexperienced and untied men, none of whom have expressed their views in the matter? This is a question of vital importance to Redcliff and district.

Then there is the question of the province securing the control of our natural resources. All must admit that Premier Stewart and his government have worked faithfully and untiringly to secure these. There is little doubt that their efforts have met with success and that now Alberta is on the eve of a settlement in this matter, regardless and independent of the provinces concerned. In this, too, Redcliff and district are vitally concerned, on account of our clay, coal and gas deposits. Here again we are in the middle of the stream, and our surest way of getting to the other side is by the return to power of the Stewart government, the leaders of which have this matter well in hand.

Besides these there are many other movements inaugurated by the government, some of which are still in the mid-stream stage. Among these are the Health Act, Municipal Hospitals, Nurses for Districts, Educational Advantages, Telephone Extension, Labor Laws, Workmen's Compensation, improvements in town, village and rural municipal laws, and scores of others.

In none of these has the opposition any criticism to offer or any improvements to suggest. In whose hands, then, will they be best administered and carried to a successful conclusion? Those who conceived and started them or those whose only ambition is to get into power?

On the whole it seems to me that the old adage: "Don't swap horses in the middle of a stream," is very apropos in this election.

GOOD GOVERNMENT.

Newspapers and periodicals of all shades have at different times praised the Stewart government for its good legislation enacted from time to time. The latest to come out strong in favor of this government is "Agricultural Alberta," a farmers' magazine with a wide circulation in this province. Under the above heading this magazine says:

"A good government is the one thing all are interested in, be they Liberal, Conservative, United Farmers, Labor, Independent or called by any name. If we but stop to consider we can arrive at but one conclusion, viz: that this province for some years has been wisely and well governed. That it has been a Liberal government, in more ways than one, has been apparent to all. Through dark days as well as bright ones they remained true to the principles of Liberalism at all costs. In this no one can find fault. It is a wise man who is steadfast in the faith that is in him. It is a good government that remains steadfast to the faith that is in it. Their faith in the progress and prosperity of this province has been well established. Their policy has been one of progress, stability and honesty of purpose, at no time or place failing to give service to the people of this province far in excess of that enjoyed by the people of any other province.

Few governments have been called upon to meet emergencies, in fact, disaster, of so difficult a nature as has the Stewart Government. War time and pestilence, drought, crop failure, extreme weather conditions, difficult financial situations and kindred handicaps—all have been safely overcome and liberal help given to many in time of need. We must not forget these things. We must not become ungrateful. We must not lay aside the substance and grasp at the shadow. There doubtless has been at times in the history of all peoples a change of government has been a blessing. At this time, in this province, it is neither wise nor necessary. There always will be office seekers, be they individuals, or in groups. There is no dearth at this election. No good reason has been advanced that we can find that would warrant us at this time in coming to any other conclusion than that the welfare of this province is safe in the hands of the present Stewart Government. We, as a people, should not only show our appreciation but do all in our power to eliminate and discourage those who, from a selfish standpoint, seek to stir up a feeling of distrust and dissatisfaction at a time when co-operation and co-ordination of provincial affairs is most necessary."

The Calgary Herald has the following to say regarding the actions of the U.F.A. in this constituency:—"It is somewhat surprising to find the U. F. A. placing a candidate in the field in Red cliff in opposition to Speaker Pingle, of the Alberta Legislature. The speaker, by the very nature of his position, is an impartial member of the house and Mr. Pingle's fairness to all sides in the recent session has been acknowledged. To have allowed him to have his seat by acclamation would have been the reasonable thing to do and would have given some substance to the farmers' plea for a finer spirit in politics."

The contemplated piping of natural gas from the Redcliff field to Calgary will be a serious matter to this town if it is allowed to be carried out, and every effort should be made by our town council to prevent it if possible.

Province of Alberta Co-operative Credit Societies

The Provincial Government has provided legislation designed to encourage the co-operation of farmers by adequate credit, longer term loans, lower interest rates, cash prices for purchases, saving of time and labour, and a improved community spirit.

Increased Farm Credit depends upon—
 (1) Greater reliability of loans.
 (2) Certainty of repayment.
 (3) Adequate powers of security.

The Alberta Co-operative Credit Act, in its amended form, grants exceptional powers in the matter of the security of loans, and thus repayment can be safely provided for.

Organization of a Society requires—
 1. Fifteen signatures to petition to incorporate.

THE REDCLIFF REVIEW

Beneficial Effects

Of School Fairs

School fairs are to the boys and girls of the land what the larger fairs are to adults. By this time they should be thoroughly organized; prize lists published and circulated, and progress of proceedings prepared, the two indeed given in one publication. These fairs increase in number every year and are proving of incalculable value in the agricultural education of the young and even in beneficially influencing the more mature. Of course boys' and girls' clubs are the principal feeders of the fairs, but entries are usually accepted from children who are not members of any such organization. Agricultural representatives all testify to the splendid effect the fairs are having upon farm life and agricultural pursuits generally. One, for instance, writes: "I do not know of any one thing which is a greater factor in improving the farm production and the farm industry of the country than the school fairs. . . . In addition to bringing direct, practical results, school fairs have had a very effective influence in encouraging teachers to take up the teaching of agriculture in the public schools." Another states the importance of the school fair cannot be over-emphasized. It teaches our future farmers how they can take the most out of the soil. It makes our rural people better and happier." In recognition of the truth of the old adage "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," a programme of sports is usually included in the day's list of proceedings.

Irish Truce Is

Now Effective

The truce in Ireland, agreed upon by government officials and republican leaders pending negotiations, went into effect at noon last Monday. In Dublin complete disappearance from the streets of military police lorries and armoured cars marked the official beginning of the truce. In Londonderry, according to the terms of the truce, the police at noon were summoned to their barracks and handed in their revolvers, subsequently returning street duty unarmed. In Belfast, where the disorders began on Sunday were still continuing in a lesser degree, the police were still retaining their arms. Rumour in Valencia for two weeks for his conference with Mr. Lloyd George to discuss the basis of settlement of the Irish problem.

Officials announcement to this effect was issued. Mr. Lloyd George, who spent the week at Cheltenham Court, with the premiers of the British dominions, returned to London to arrange the final details for his meeting with Mr. de Valera, which may mark an epoch in the relations of Ireland and Great Britain.

The truce between the crown forces and the Irish republican army became effective at noon, but there were apprehensions that the latter might be misled by the latter's propaganda in Ireland would be hard to control.

Canada's Population

Nearing 10 Million

A preliminary estimate of the census department at Ottawa places the 1921 population of Canada at 9,234,000, with all provinces except Nova Scotia showing substantial gains, the grand total for the decade since 1911 being augmented by 2,650,000.

According to the same figures, western Canada's population this year is 2,893,192 persons, as against the 1911 figure of 1,655,721. The provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

Premier Meighen

Represents U.S. Views

The Boston Transcript, speaking of Premier Meighen's efforts on behalf of Anglo-American unity says:

"So nearly does Premier Meighen of Canada, represent the views of the United States on the Anglo-Japanese question that he is accredited with representing the North American viewpoint rather than merely that of Canada. It has developed that these slitting about the Imperial Conference table believe that the United States has a noble champion in the young political leader."

There has been much talk of late concerning the value of constant friendship between the British Empire and the United States, the importance of which one but the Hearst newspapers challenge. Premier Meighen has, done something definite and impressive in proof of Canada's desire to see cordial relations between the English-speaking nations perpetuated.

Record of Stewart Government is One of Inspiring Achievement

Even E. F. Ewing, Leader of One Faction of the Opposition, Has No Serious Criticism to Make of Administration's Record.

IN the manifesto recently issued by Mr. Ewing, the main burden of his criticism is "the staggering debt of the province." The manifesto is full of glaring inaccuracies. He places the indebtedness of the province, for instance, at sixty-three million dollars. That is not true, and in making that statement Mr. Ewing not only attempts to destroy the financial standing of the province, but also impugns the character of all the Canadian and U.S. Bond Houses who have purchased Alberta Bonds. It is a well known fact that no bond house will purchase provincial bonds without first investigating the financial condition of the province and experts are always called in for that purpose. Their official finding is incorporated in the prospectus, issued when the bonds are placed on the market. Such a prospectus, issued on Dec. 31, 1920, placed the Alberta debt at $41,989,900, less a sinking fund account of $1,231,159, and telephone utility indebtedness amounting to $15,834.90, making a net debt of $24,924,945.90.

Mr. Ewing does not know, although he ought to know, that no municipality in the Dominion does include, or is expected to include, utility bonds in any statement of its net debt. Mr. Ewing also includes university bonds and other guaranteed bonds in his statement of the general debt, whereas they are but an indirect obligation, and are fully covered by assets and mortgages, altogether separate and distinct from the assets belonging to the province.

Mr. Ewing speaks of the indebtedness of the province as if it were money thrown away, never to return, with not a cent to show for it. He reminds one of an amateur accountant, pushing his brains to discover the story that the books really tell, and finally making a haphazard guess at it. If he cared to do so, he could find out that represented in the indebtedness of the province are reproductive undertakings, such as the telephone system, which is a wonderful asset, and could be readily disposed of for twice what it cost the province.

And then, included in the indebtedness are revenue-producing investments amounting to about seven million dollars. The province is drawing interest on these investments and the principal is secured. Nearly eighteen million dollars are represented in indirectly productive works, all of which can be properly included as assets of the province.

VALUABLE ASSETS OF PROVINCE.

Mr. Ewing referred in his manifesto to the public debt. He did not refer to a single asset. He did not say that the assets of the province are of the most valuable kind and that the province has something to show for every dollar expended. Mr. Ewing knows very well that the province of Alberta cannot be developed without the borrowing and expenditure of money. He also knows that all the money thus far borrowed has been expended wisely and with due regard to the public interest, and that the government policy in this respect has resulted in a development that is little short of amazing.

Mr. Ewing is just as glaringly inaccurate when he speaks of the Supplementary Revenue Tax as being "first introduced under the name of the Patriotic Tax Act." That is also not true. The Patriotic Tax Act was introduced solely for the benefit of the Canadian Patriotic fund, and not one cent of it was diverted to the general revenue of the province. The Supplementary Tax Act of 1918 was an independent measure entirely, and contained no reference to "patriotic requirements." It constituted the first general tax on the people of the province as a whole, and is the only direct tax in existence. It is a very light charge on land values.

Mr. Ewing's "manifesto" is really a compliment to the government. He makes no reference to, and has no criticism to make of the great volume of legislation placed on the statute books by the last administrations of Alberta since 1905, culminating in the splendid measures for which the Stewart government has been responsible.

There is not a word in Mr. Ewing's manifesto about the outstanding Educational Policy of the government, by which Alberta has set the pace for advanced educational systems elsewhere. Not a word about the policy of equal opportunity for all school children throughout the province. Not a word about the fact that Alberta's 4,300 schools are now operating one hundred per cent. strong, with only 230 permit teachers in the whole of the province. Not a word about the government's policy of raising the standard of teacher training, or of the practice to lend, particularly to rural teachers, government funds up to $400 in each case, repayable over a period of two years after graduation, thus leading to more competent teachers and a largely increased teacher supply. Not a word about the policy of ensuring continuous operation of rural schools, and more contented rural teachers, by paying one-third of the cost of building and furnishing teachers' residences. Not a word about the policy of allowing children in the rural schools to write their high school entrance examinations at their own schools, instead of compelling them to go to the towns and cities for the purpose at great expense. Not a word about the policy of carrying high school education to the rural districts. Not a word about the government's solution of the problem of over-crowded rural schools, and the present practice of voting three times the usual grant to two-room schools. Not a word, in short, about the government's policy of equal educational opportunity for all school children in the province. Not a word about the government's slogan of school facilities for every child and every child at school.

MR. EWING'S CURIOUS SILENCE

Take the government's legislation for women and children. Not a word from Mr. Ewing on the subject! Surely if he had any criticism to make, he would have said so in his manifesto! Mrs. H. M. Edwards, of Macleod, president of the Provincial Council of Women, in the preface of her book on "The Legal Status of the Women of Alberta," says:

"The women of Alberta are more favored in regard to legal status than are those of any other province in Canada. The government's appreciation of the work of the women in standing shoulder to shoulder with their menfolk in the development of their country has been shown by giving them the premier place in the Dominion. Alberta was the first province in Canada to call women to a legislative assembly, the first to ask a woman to accept a judge's seat in the courts of justice, and the first to hand her aldermanic honors. Alberta was the first province to grant equal provincial and municipal suffrage regardless of sex distinction; the first to grant absolute equal parental rights, not only as co-guardian, but giving the mother in 1920 every right in her child that had been exclusively held by the father, even to sharing with the father his rights in the intestate estate of the son or daughter."

There are other laws affecting women, such as the Dower act of 1917, by which the property is reserved to the wife not only during the lifetime of her husband, but after his death and during her lifetime. Then there is the Exemption from Seizure Ordinance of 1916, which protects the family homestead from seizure under execution, and gives adequate protection to every home. A wife is also now entitled by common law to all rents and profits from her own real estate, the title formerly resting with the husband. A form of widow's pension is provided by the Mother's Allowance Act, whereby the government pays to every mother requiring assistance a sum sufficient to enable her to raise and educate her family, half the cost being borne by the government, and the other half by the municipality in which she resides. The Married Women's Relief Act protects a widow's interest in her husband's estate, notwithstanding provisions of a will to the contrary, the question of her rights being left for a Supreme court judge to decide.

Mr. Ewing in his manifesto says not a word about all this beneficent legislation on behalf of women and children. He apparently has no criticism to make, and is not willing to give credit where credit is due.

GOVERNMENT'S SPLENDID RECORD.

The electors of the province can form only one conclusion from Mr. Ewing's studied silence on all these subjects, and that is he has no criticism to make of the general record of the government. That being the case, there is only one thing to do.

In the same way Mr. Ewing is silent about the splendid policy of the government on behalf of agriculture and kindred interests. He has not a word to say about the way the government, during the crop failures in certain districts during the years 1918, 1919, 1920, came to the assistance of the farmers to the tune of $1,200,000. Not a word about the Co-Operative Credit Act, by which fifteen or more farmers may organize themselves into a mutual credit society, and secure short term loans from banks at the lowest possible rate of interest, the government standing behind these societies with a full guarantee of the borrowing. Not a word about the six splendid agricultural schools of the province, known from one end of the Dominion to the other, or of the College of Agriculture at the University, providing higher channels of study for the graduates of these schools. Not a word about the famous "Cow Collar" by which settlers in newer districts are able to sell their cattle under government loans. Not a word about the Farm Machinery Act, by which farmers are protected from unscrupulous machinery and other contracts. Not a word about the Hon. Duncan Marshall's splendid fight for the removal of the embargo or about the large number of acts not mentioned above for the encouragement and protection of Alberta's basic industries.

Mr. Ewing is also curiously silent about the government's policy of providing means for getting in and out of the rural districts; of its appropriation this year of two and one-quarter millions for roads, bridges and ferries, making a total appropriation in five years for that purpose of six and one-half million; or about the ward from Mr. Ewing about the government's magnificent irrigation policy, although people of all shades of political thought throughout the province have praised the government for its action in this respect.

Not a word from Mr. Ewing about the government's policy of obtaining wide markets for Alberta coal—a policy that has resulted in increasing the annual output of coal in the last two years from 5,000,000 to 7,000,000 tons. Not a word about the government's beneficent labor legislation, or of the plan to create a department of labor at the next session, with a deputy minister in charge.

Imperial Oil Co. Spends Huge Sum In Drilling For Oil

According to A. M. McQuinn, of the Imperial Oil Company, his company has expended to date more than two million dollars in making preparations, bringing in machinery and well drilling crews, and organizing gangs of laborers who are putting down holes from the international boundary north, almost to the Arctic Ocean. In addition to this, the Imperial Oil Company has erected its own machine shop in Calgary, and is doing all repair work on its drilling outfits used in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Seventy-Five Families Take Up Land in the Lloydminster District This Season.

The flow of newcomers which the spring season has been bringing to the Lloydminster district is continuing unabated, and to date some seventy-five families have arrived and acquired land. Two or three times this number is expected before the end of the farming season. In addition to the marriage of five thousand head of cattle, two thousand hogs, and eight hundred sheep, more than two million bushels of grain were shipped from this district last year. An increase of fifty per cent. in the wheat yield from the increased acreage is expected this year.

Canned Dancer

No Chances Should Be Taken With Canned Foods.

In February of this year a woman in Seattle died from eating three small tins of canned beans. She knew that the beans showed signs of spoilage, but she "tasted them with fatal results." Referring to this case, the United States Public Health Service says that it is dangerous to eat any canned food that shows "the slightest unnatural odor, unnatural color, swelling of the container, signs of leakage or any evidence of decomposition whatever." Such food may contain the bacilli of "botulism," which engender one of the most dangerous of known organic poisons.

By Marie Belmont.

Cool and inviting is this dainty negligee for summer days. It is fashioned from coral handkerchief linen, although you might develop in it in any other shade you desire. If you preferred you might even use a pastel shade of satin or combine two shades of chiffon. Where World Gets Lumber

Canadian Vessel Catches Vancouver With Over Five Million Feet of Pine and Lumber for Japan.

The biggest cargo of lumber that ever sailed from the port of Vancouver left recently on the Canadian Government steamer, Canadian Highlander. She had aboard 5,100,000 feet of pine and lumber for Kobe, Tokyo Bay and Niigawa, Japan. There have been many three and four million foot cargoes sent from Vancouver in the past few years and the Canadian Robert Dollar Company's big steamer, Robert Dollar, sailed recently from Puget Sound with 6,000,000 feet, but only 3,000,000 of this was loaded at Vancouver. One of the Canadian steamers, operated by that company, took 4,800,000 feet last year, and that was the record until the Canadian Highlander's cargo.

Why Should The United Farmers of Alberta

Oppose The

STEWART GOVERNMENT?

Premier Stewart is one of the best farmers in the province.

The Provincial government has enacted more legislation in the interests of the farmers than any other government in Canada.

The platform of the U. F. A. is almost identically the platform of the Stewart government.

All classes and sections have received the utmost consideration at all times from Premier Stewart and his cabinet.

The government has been progressive and business-like.

Critical times are ahead, and the government is prepared to cope with these problems in an experienced and careful manner.

Why, Then, Should Premier Stewart Be Opposed

Remember what Hon. T. A. Crerar, national leader of the organized farmers, had to say when he addressed the U. F. A. convention in Edmonton, January 20th, 1921, as reported in the press.

"Mr. Crerar pointed out that the business of government, he cared not whether it was a municipality, a province, or in the wider federal field, was a business that should engage the attention of every honest citizen, no matter what his calling or occupation might be, and consequently, that being the case, he for one was willing to take common ground with the other man, whatever his profession might be, so long as he believed in policies that he, the speaker believed in, and who was willing to work with him for these ends."

"That does not mean that the position of your organization, or of any farmers' organization, is challenged," said Mr. Crerar. "It would be a thousand pities if we were to do anything in Canada today that would destroy the integrity and effectiveness of the farmers' organization." Your U.F.A. as your president has pointed out on many occasions, must continue its existence and life as a farmers' organization, built up as such, but let me say this—when you get into the wider field where you are dealing with matters of vital importance to all the people of the country, do not refuse the support and assistance of the man who is willing to work with you toward that end. You will fall in your final purpose if your motive is to seek power alone for the sake of power. It would be a fatal mistake if we became unimpaired with the desire to acquire power in government merely for the sake of having it."

CRITICAL TIMES IN THE ERA OF RE-ESTABLISHMENT ARE STILL AHEAD—

THE WORDS OF HON. MR. CHEREAR CARRY A NOTE OF GRAVE WARNING—THE STEWART GOV'T HAS AN UNCHALLENGED RECORD OF

SPLENDID PUBLIC SERVICE. WHY NOT STAND TOGETHER

—AND WORK TOGETHER
